

FLIGHTSIMCON TRAVEL GUIDE

The venue for FlightSimCon 2017, the Sheraton Hotel at Bradley Airport, is connected directly to Hartford's Bradley International Airport (BDL). This location is extremely convenient for those traveling via air, as renting a car or organizing other ground transportation is not required.

Air Travel

Bradley International Airport can be reached from almost every North American city and most European cities with one-stop or direct service. If you are traveling from Europe, consider taking advantage of Aer Lingus' non-stop service between Dublin and Hartford. In all cases, we strongly recommend flying into Bradley International Airport (BDL), even if it means a connecting flight. Flying to New York or Boston and then trying to reach Bradley via car or other ground transportation can be inconvenient and expensive.

If you are considering traveling on Southwest Airlines, please remember that fares are only available on their website, <http://www.southwest.com>.

A list of car rental companies at Bradley International Airport can be found online. However, note that attendees typically do not rent a car since the conference venue is connected directly to the airport.
